

CENTER FOR TRANSATLANTIC RELATIONS

Edited by Manuel Castells and Gustavo Cardoso

The world stands at the crossroads of development of the network society. Yet current social systems stall the dynamics of creativity. Is government ready to accept democracy of communication? Are economic players aware of the need to redefine property rights? Jorge Sampaio, President of the Portuguese Republic, invited prominent researchers and politicians from the U.S., EU and South America to examine the opportunities and challenges of the network society—and to offer recommendations for policy.
